Ecquaria Enforces Service Mindset through Technology

Delighting Customers, Delighting Stakeholders

That's the mantra of organizations which Ecquaria believes should be the renewed corporate focus as organizations move towards a Service-Oriented culture.

The development of a service mindset and the ability to commit stipulated service covenant levels to stakeholders across the organization's service delivery chain are important hallmarks of a progressive Service-Oriented organization.

The great news is that technology is now available to empower end users and customers to do just that. Based on Ecquaria's Service Covenant Framework™ (Ecquaria SCF™), Ecquaria SOP™ empowers Service Covenants to be established intuitively and the associated Key Performance Indicators tracked and reported in real-time.

With this technical prowess built into The Platform as a forethought, Delighting Customers, Delighting Stakeholders is no longer a far-fetched reality.

Ecquaria is delighted to share more with you at our next Ecquaria Forum 2006. Read EVENTS below.

EVENTS

Ecquaria Forum 2006: SOA Vs SOA

Ecquaria hosted our first Ecquaria Forum 2006 on 17 February 2006 for our customers. The event was a resounding success in which participants found it informative and refreshing.

Centered on the theme 'SOA Vs SOA' (Service-Oriented Approach Vs Service-Oriented Architecture), the Forum introduced a radical and an insightful perspective into the current SOA hype by looking at how we can help customers effectively develop and enforce a service mindset along with the ability to commit stipulated service covenant levels to stakeholders across their service delivery chain. These are important hallmarks of a progressive Service-Oriented organization.

Forum highlight included how Ecquaria's unique Service Covenant Framework™ helps frame compelling Service-Oriented solutions leveraging on the Ecquaria Service-Oriented Platform™ technology that empower end users and customers with the tools and mechanism to do real-time tracking of Service Level Agreements (SLAs).

Due to the overwhelming response, we are delighted to announce the second round of the Forum will be held on 28th April 2006.
